

I think it is time for the FCC to eliminate the requirement for Morse Code in all Amateur Radio license classes, while retaining portions of each band for CW use. I recognize CW as a viable method of communicating, but it is only one of many available today. Requiring an applicant to demonstrate the ability to send and/or receive Morse Code makes about as much sense as requiring someone to demonstrate the ability to use every digital mode available to users today